10.3 Social security contributions and payroll taxes

10.3.1 Contributions payable by employees and benefit recipients

According to the national legislation (Law no. 571/2003 Fiscal Code with subsequent amendments), the employees are paying the following social contributions:

- for unemployment schemes – 0.5% from the monthly gross income (Article 296¹⁸, paragraph (3) letter d¹) Law no. 571/2003);
- for health care schemes – 5.5% from the monthly gross income (Article 296¹⁸, paragraph (3) letter b¹) Law no. 571/2003);
- for social-security schemes – 10.5% from the monthly gross income (including 4 % corresponding to the private pension funds (Article 296¹⁸, paragraph (3) letter a¹) Law no. 571/2003); If the basis value is greater than five times the average gross earnings³, the individual social security contribution rate will be applied to the equivalent of five times the average gross earnings (Article 296⁴, paragraph (2) Law no. 571/2003).

The ceiling of the employees' social security contributions is applied since January 1st 2011. In the table below are the values of the average gross earnings for each year starting with 2008:

Year	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013
Average gross earnings stipulated through the State Budget Law (lei)	1550	1693	1836	2022	2117	2223

Concerning the contributions to the private pension fund, these are compulsory for all employees aged up to 35 years old at 31st December 2007. For employees aged between 35 and 45 years old at that date this contribution is on voluntary basis.

The contribution to the private pension fund is part of the contribution for social security schemes and is transferred by the employer to a private pension fund chosen by the employee. It was foreseen to start in 2008 with a share of 2% from the gross monthly earnings and end in 2016 with a share of 6% from the gross monthly earnings. The basis for the contribution to the private pension fund is the same base established for social security scheme (gross monthly earnings).

The amount so calculated does not mean money overpaid and no amount will be withheld in excess of the monthly earnings. It is part of the 10.5% amount representing the social security scheme and already deducted from the gross monthly earnings. Thus, from the entire contribution to social security scheme, the amount representing the contribution to the private pension fund is transferred to the respective funds and the rest, up to 10.5%, is transferred to the public pension system. As the percentage that is transferred to the private funds increase, the amount transferred to the public pension system decrease correspondingly.

In the table below is detailed the share of the gross monthly earnings transferred to the private pension fund only from the employee side, as stipulated every year in the State Budget Law:

³ The average gross earnings used as a ceiling for computing the individual social security contribution is established by the Ministry of Finance, every year through the State Budget Law.

ANNEX

DEFINITION OF SOCIAL SECURITY CONTRIBUTIONS AND PAYROLL TAXES.

The following text has been adapted from Annex A of the OECD Revenue Statistics.

Social security contributions to general government

Classified here are all compulsory payments that confer an entitlement to receive a (contingent) future social benefit. Such payments are usually earmarked to finance social benefits and are often paid to institutions of general government that provide such benefits. However, such earmarking is not part of the definition of social security contributions and is not required for a tax to be classified here. However, conferment of an entitlement is required for a tax to be classified under this heading. So, levies on income or payroll that are earmarked for social security funds but do not confer an entitlement to benefit are excluded from this heading and shown under personal income taxes or taxes on payroll and workforce. Taxes on other bases, such as goods and services, which are earmarked for social security benefits are not shown here [...] because they generally confer no entitlement to social security benefits.

Contributions for the following types of social security benefits would, inter alia, be included: unemployment insurance benefits and supplements, accident, injury and sickness benefits, old-age, disability and survivors' pensions, family allowances, reimbursements for medical and hospital expenses or provision of hospital or medical services. Contributions may be levied on both employees and employers.

Social security contributions paid to institutions outside general government

Contributions to social insurance schemes which are not institutions of general government and to other types of insurance schemes, provident funds, pension funds, friendly societies or other saving schemes [are included here if they are compulsory or quasicompulsory (e.g., by virtue of agreement with professional and union organisations)]. Provident funds are arrangements under which the contributions of each employee and of the corresponding employer on his/her behalf are kept in a separate account earning interest and withdrawable under specific circumstances. Pension funds are separately organised schemes negotiated between employees and employers and carry provisions for different contributions and benefits, sometimes more directly tied to salary levels and length of service than under social security schemes.

Payroll taxes

This heading covers taxes paid by employers or employees either as a proportion of payroll or as a fixed amount per person, and which do not confer entitlement to social benefits. Examples of taxes classified here are the United Kingdom national insurance surcharge (introduced in 1977), the Swedish payroll tax (1969-1979), and the Austrian Contribution to the Family Burden Equalisation Fund and Community Tax.
