The guaranteed minimum income is given on a monthly basis and represents a social support benefit to guarantee a certain standard of living if no other means of income can be obtained.

Social assistance, part of the national social protection system, consists of social services and social assistance benefits, granted in order to develop individual and collective abilities to ensure social needs, increasing the quality of life and promoting the principles of cohesion and social inclusion. Social assistance benefits represent a form of supplementing or substituting income obtained through labour, in order to ensure a minim living standard, as well as a form of support in order to promote social inclusion and increasing the quality of life of vulnerable groups, as defined by law. Social services represent the activity or set of activities performed to address the social needs, as well as special needs for the person, family, group, in order to surpass the situations of difficulty, to prevent and fight the risk of social exclusion, and increase the quality of life.

On December 2011 a new Law on Social Assistance was adopted (Law No. 292; the first law on social assistance was adopted in 2001). The law ensures the legal and institutional unitary and coordinated framework, through which the general principles and rules for granting social assistance measures are regulated, as well as the system organizing and functioning criteria, in order to ensure adequate conditions for elaborating and implementing sectorial public policies in this area. Under this new law, social assistance benefits are linked to the Social Reference Indicator (SRI) in order to ensure compatibility with unemployment insurance benefits (according to law no. 76/2002 on the unemployment insurance system and stimulation of the employment including subsequent amendments). This will also create the basis for implementing an integrated IT system which will ensure comparability and linkages between different social protection measures (contributory or non-contributory), which are provided for a person or a family. Hence, the eligibility thresholds and amounts of social assistance benefits are established in relation to the SRI by applying a social insertion index.

Social assistance, through specific measures and actions, aims to develop individual, group or collective capacities to provide social needs, increase the quality of life and promote cohesion principles and social inclusion.

Social assistance measures and actions are performed so that:

- a. social assistance benefits and social services to be one package of interrelated and complementary measures;
- b. social services take priority over social assistance benefits, if their cost and impact on beneficiaries is similar;
- c. be evaluated periodically in terms of effectiveness and efficiency to be permanently adapted and adjusted to the real needs of beneficiaries;
- d. contribute to the beneficiaries' integration on labour market; to prevent and limit any form of dependence on the aid granted by the state or community

Social assistance benefits are a form of additional income or substitution of individual/family income earned from work in order to ensure a minimal standard of living and a form of support to promote social inclusion and increase quality of life of certain categories of persons whose social rights that are expressly provided by law.

The GMI is the programme for granting the social aid, according to the conditions and amounts provided by law no. 416/2001 on guaranteed minimum income (including subsequent modifications and completions); the social aid is established as the difference between the guaranteed minimum income levels stipulated by law and the monthly net income of the eligible family or single person.

4.2.1 Calculation of gross benefit

4.2.1.2 Obligations of family members

In exchange for the social assistance payments, one of the family members/lone person must perform a certain number of working hours in the benefit of the municipality (for granting guaranteed minimum income), except the families or lone person for which the social aid calculated is up to 50 lei / month; for these, the working hours are set quarterly and undertaken in the first month of payment.

The working hours shall be calculated in proportion to the amount of social aid that the family or lone person benefits, with an hourly rate corresponding to the minimum gross base salary guaranteed in payment, reported to the monthly average duration of working time. The number of working days, limited to a monthly norm of 21.25, is determined by dividing the calculated working hours to 8 hours / day. The fractions are round in plus.

The obligation to perform the actions or local interest works mentioned above can be transferred to other persons in the family, with the consent of the mayor, if the person nominated to carry out the actions or local interest works is in temporary incapacity for work or have lost totally or partially his/her capacity to work.

4.2.2 Income and earnings disregards for benefit recipients and those starting a new job

In the estimation of the monthly net income of the family/lone person all members incomes are taking into account (after all tax deductions are applied), including all types of family allowances and social benefits.

This programme is based on means testing and is aimed at encouraging social inclusion. It includes incentives to work - the eligible individual who has a job obtains an increase of 15% in benefits - and promotes the principles of responsibility, active participation of beneficiaries through involvement in work, and activities for the benefit of the community.

The programme for heating benefits during the cold season (according to the Emergency Government Ordinance no. 70/2011 regarding measures of social protection during the cold season). This is available to families who use thermal energy in a centralized house heating system, persons who use natural gas, wood, coal, oil, and electricity, starting with 2013, are eligible to benefit from these measures. The Emergency Government Ordinance stipulates the maximum income of a person or a family for being eligible to the heating allowance, and it stipulates allowance amounts for heating with natural gas, wood, coal, oil, electricity and thermal energy in a centralized system.

Except for the Heating Benefits (HB), which are granted every year for the period of the cold season (since November until March), the Guaranteed Minimum Income (GMI) and the Family Allowance (FA) are granted monthly, as long as the persons/families comply with the eligibility criteria established by the national legislation.

In May 2013, the GEO no.42/2013, increased the amount of the social assistance benefits provisioned by Law no.416/2001 (on the guaranteed minimum income) and Law no.277/2010 (on family allowance), in order to provide a more efficient financial coverage of the poorest people. In order to achieve this goal the minimum guaranteed income for single persons and families has been increased by 8,5% starting with July 2013, this being followed by another increase by 4,5%, starting with January 2014

The social benefits in Romania are paid monthly. Regarding the 500 RON limit, this amount represents the value of reference social indicator. There is no limit regarding this issue, if the person or family are eligible for getting the social benefits, they will get without any limit.

The majority of social benefits in Romania are means tested (guaranteed minimum income, allowance for family support, heating benefits). There are some other benefits which are not means tested, such as: child allowance.

One of the persons able to work of the beneficiary family who are entitled to benefit of the guaranteed minimum income, has to work in community but taking into account the amount of the benefits which the family gets. This measure is stipulated in the Law no. 416/2001 on the guaranteed minimum income and it is implemented only for this social benefit. The minimum income scheme is granted to the people with no income or very low income and fulfilled the conditions stipulated by Law no. 416/2001.

Person in care is defined as the wife/husband, children or other family members whose incomes are less than 300 Lei.

10.2 Treatment of family income

10.3 Social security contributions and payroll taxes

10.3.1 Contributions payable by employees and benefit recipients

According to the national legislation (Law no. 227/2015 Fiscal Code with subsequent amendments), the employees are paying the following social contributions:

- for unemployment schemes – 0.5% from the monthly gross income (Article 186 Law no. 227/2015);
- for health care schemes – 5.5% from the monthly gross income (Article 156 Law no. 227/2015);
- for social-security schemes – 10.5% from the monthly gross income (including 5.1 % corresponding to the private pension funds (Article 138 Law no. 227/2015); If the basis value is greater than five times the average gross earnings³, the individual social security contribution rate will be applied to the equivalent of five times the average gross earnings (Article 146, par.6 Law no. 227/2015).

The ceiling of the employees' social security contributions is applied since January 1st 2011. In the table below are the values of the average gross earnings for each year starting with 2008:

Year	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016
Average gross earnings stipulated through the State Budget Law (lei/month)	1550	1693	1836	2022	2117	2223	2298	2415	2681

Concerning the contributions to the private pension fund, these are compulsory for all employees aged up to 35 years old at 31st December 2007. For employees aged between 35 and 45 years old at that date this contribution is on voluntary basis.

The contribution to the private pension fund is part of the contribution for social security schemes and is transferred by the employer to a private pension fund chosen by the employee. It was foreseen to start in 2008 with a share of 2% from the gross monthly earnings and end in 2016 with a share of 6% from the gross monthly earnings. The basis for the contribution to the private pension fund is the same base established for social security scheme (gross monthly earnings).

The amount so calculated does not mean money overpaid and no amount will be withheld in excess of the monthly earnings. It is part of the 10.5% amount representing the social security scheme and already deducted from the gross monthly earnings. Thus, from the entire contribution to social security scheme, the amount representing the contribution to the private pension fund is transferred to the respective funds and the rest, up to 10.5%, is transferred to the public pension system. As the percentage that is transferred to the private funds increase, the amount transferred to the public pension system decrease correspondingly.

2009	2.00%
2010	2.50%

ANNEX

DEFINITION OF SOCIAL SECURITY CONTRIBUTIONS AND PAYROLL TAXES.

The following text has been adapted from Annex A of the OECD Revenue Statistics.

Social security contributions to general government

Classified here are all compulsory payments that confer an entitlement to receive a (contingent) future social benefit. Such payments are usually earmarked to finance social benefits and are often paid to institutions of general government that provide such benefits. However, such earmarking is not part of the definition of social security contributions and is not required for a tax to be classified here. However, conferment of an entitlement is required for a tax to be classified under this heading. So, levies on income or payroll that are earmarked for social security funds but do not confer an entitlement to benefit are excluded from this heading and shown under personal income taxes or taxes on payroll and workforce. Taxes on other bases, such as goods and services, which are earmarked for social security benefits are not shown here [...] because they generally confer no entitlement to social security benefits.

Contributions for the following types of social security benefits would, inter alia, be included: unemployment insurance benefits and supplements, accident, injury and sickness benefits, old-age, disability and survivors' pensions, family allowances, reimbursements for medical and hospital expenses or provision of hospital or medical services. Contributions may be levied on both employees and employers.

Social security contributions paid to institutions outside general government

Contributions to social insurance schemes which are not institutions of general government and to other types of insurance schemes, provident funds, pension funds, friendly societies or other saving schemes [are included here if they are compulsory or quasicompulsory (e.g., by virtue of agreement with professional and union organisations)]. Provident funds are arrangements under which the contributions of each employee and of the corresponding employer on his/her behalf are kept in a separate account earning interest and withdrawable under specific circumstances. Pension funds are separately organised schemes negotiated between employees and employers and carry provisions for different contributions and benefits, sometimes more directly tied to salary levels and length of service than under social security schemes.

Payroll taxes

This heading covers taxes paid by employers or employees either as a proportion of payroll or as a fixed amount per person, and which do not confer entitlement to social benefits. Examples of taxes classified here are the United Kingdom national insurance surcharge (introduced in 1977), the Swedish payroll tax (1969-1979), and the Austrian Contribution to the Family Burden Equalisation Fund and Community Tax.
